- ~~The Untorgotten Night~~
Hypnagogia

Imagine this:

Have you ever been in a house that was soo unsettling that you had to pack up and leave before sunrise? Well, this happened to me and my friends and since, then, our lives have never been the same.

It all started on a friday night at 9 PM where some of my friends and I were scrolling on social media where our eyes caught an interesting post that intrigued us: "WE STAYED OVER AT THE MOST HAUNTED COTTAGE IN USA."

The entire video post was about our favourite Youtubers going into a lost cottage and witnessed many paranormal events there like things moving and switching places, doors flipping open, lights flickering and random footsteps when no-one is there. At first, we thought it seems kind of bizzare but eventually we did some research and decided that we would find out for ourselves if it was true so that same night, at 10:50 PM, we left the cottage

Once we arrived, we were in front of a massive rotton iron for the gate and old copper tiles on the top creaking weakingly as if no one had renovated since it was built decades ago. We took the keys and went inside and looking back now, I wish I hadn't.

We went into the courtyard and saw no-one around but our eyes caught on a few grave stones nearby which took us off a bit so we went in and saw a dimly lit hall with old-fashioned furniture and carpets. We decided to go in to the room and put our stuff down then begin exploring

Then we heard something from the kitchen, a noise: not loud but there. We immediantly ran in and saw something that made my heart skip a beat: a tap opened, blasting water fully and a cup on the floor like someone tried to get a cup of water, threw the cup on the floor and left.

We just shrugged it off, knowing we can't leave now. So we went exploring for a bit then went back to our room, and started watching some TV.

At 12:00PM, we heard footsteps: our hearts dropped. We were all in the same room and no one was meant to be here except us so we peeked out the window and saw a women walking around then into an empty room so we went in and she was gone

Eventually, We were on edge: our hearts beating fast like a lawnmower with a washing machine next to it. We decided to sleep it out, all of us having trouble sleeping after our experience but but eventually we dozed cause we all heard a sound that made us jump out of bed like a cactus slipped in our blankets. We were frightened, then the cupboard door smashed open. We immediately left bed, took our stuff and broke out the gates to the car, our hearts thumping and we drove out at 100 mph.

This was a night I'll never forget
To be continued...

What an amazing
